MATT JUUL, BOSTON FEATURES EDITOR

From Danny Zuko in "Grease" to Vincent Vega in "Pulp Fiction," John Travolta has brought many interesting characters to life on the big screen throughout his storied career. However, he's never played anyone quite as infamous as New York mobster John Gotti Sr. Travolta recently opened up to Metro about taking on the role of the former Gambino crime family boss in the new drama "Gotti," his thoughts on possibly playing a James Bond villain and more. ## KOEPKA HOLDS OFF FLEETWOOD TO WIN US OPEN

1 American Brooks Koepka putted brilliantly to win the U.S. Open by one stroke at Shinnecock Hills on Sunday, becoming the first player in almost 30 years to successfully defend his title. England's Tommy Fleetwood gave him a run for his money with a seven-under-par 63 that matched the lowest score in tournament history, but Koepka's closing 68 saw him finish top of the leaderboard on one-over 281. Dustin Johnson was left to ponder another major that got away. After starting the day in a four-way tie for the lead with Koepka, Daniel Berger and Tony Finau, 2016 champion Johnson carded a 70 to finish two shots back in third place.Masters champion Patrick Reed (68) was fourth, three strokes behind Koepka, after his early charge — five birdies in the first seven holes —f altered.With the win, Koepka become the first player to win back-to-back U.S. Opens since Curtis Strange in 1988 and 1989. "I don't think I could have dreamed of this, going back-to-back," Koepka said when interviewed by Strange on the 18th green."It feels so good to have this thing back."

UN SPECIAL ENVOY JOLIE VISITS SYRIAN REFUGEES

2 The world is failing to properly invest in the Syrian refugee crisis and families, women, and children are suffering terribly as a result, U.N. refugee agency special envoy Angelina Jolie said on Sunday. The Hollywood actress was visiting the Domiz Camp, in the semi-autonomous Kurdistan Region of Iraq, which is home to 33,000 Syrian refugees displaced by seven years of civil war. Funding received by the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) to help refugees from the Syrian conflict fell sharply this year from 2017 when the agency received only 50 percent of the funds it needed, Jolie told a news conference. "There are terrible human consequences. When there is even not the bare minimum of aid, refuge families cannot receive adequate medical treatment. Women and girls are left vulnerable to sexual violence, many children cannot go to school, and we squander the opportunity to invest in refugees," she said. UNCHR will publish figures on Tuesday that show that the number of displaced people globally, and the duration of their exiles, are "the highest they have ever been," she said.

AUSTRALIA AND CHINA RELATIONSHIP FRAYING

4 Australia's relationship with top trading partner China faces a testing two weeks as Canberra prepares to pass laws designed to limit Beijing's influence in domestic affairs amid pressure on some of its fastest growing exports. The fallout from proposed foreign interference laws will likely be exacerbated by an expected ban on China's Huawei Technologies from supplying equipment for the soon-to-be built 5G mobile broadband network on national security grounds. Australian winemakers who say their goods are being held up at Chinese ports have urged the government of Prime Minister Malcolm Turnbull to resolve diplomatic tensions blamed for the trade obstacles that some fear could spread to other major exports. Barely two years into a landmark Free Trade Agreement with China that fueled an export boom, Turnbull cited Chinese "meddling" as justification for new laws aimed at limiting foreign influence. Turnbull told parliament late last year he was concerned by reports of Chinese Communist Party interference in Australia's media, universities and politics.

US BOMBS SYRIAN POSITIONS: SYRIAN SOURCE

5 Syrian state media, citing a military source, reported on Monday that U.S.-led coalition aircraft had bombed "one of our military positions" in eastern Syria, leading to deaths and injuries, but the U.S. military denied carrying out strikes in the area. The strike took place in al-Harra, southeast of Albu Kamal, Syrian state media said. There were no immediate details on casualties. A commander in the military alliance backing Syrian President Bashar al-Assad also told Reuters that drones, "probably American," had bombed positions of Iraqi factions between Albu Kamal and Tanf and Syrian military positions. "No member of the U.S.-led coalition carried out strikes near Albu Kamal," Major Josh Jacques, a U.S. Central Command spokesman, told Reuters. The U.S.-led coalition is supporting an alliance of Syrian Arab and Kurdish militia fighting Islamic State northeast of Albu Kamal. The Syrian army, alongside allied Iran-backed militias including Lebanon's Hezbollah and Iraqi groups, drove Islamic State from Albu Kamal and its environs last year, but the jihadists have since staged attacks in the area.

Ocean Resorts Casino: A good deal, a great future and some real personality

The former Revel Atlantic City opens its doors June 28.

letters@metro.us

There are two things that Ocean Resorts Casino owner Bruce Deifik — the Colorado-based real estate developer who bought Atlantic City's famed Revel property earlier this year for $200 million — says he will do when he meets you June 28, the opening date of his new hotel and gaming hot spot.

First, he'll show you a photo of Atlantic City circa 1938. "The shot is of a town that is 100 percent activated, of people engaged and having fun in beautiful suits and dresses," he says. "There is a General Motors sign in the background and another advertising a Burns & Allen date, to signify industry.

Along with people smiling amid the bustle, you see 1938 — a time when the population was nothing like it is today. There is no reason, with a boardwalk, a beach, this ocean and the things that we alone — let alone the other casinos and hotels here — are bringing for families, adults, children and millennials, that all that can't happen again."

Then Deifik will challenge you to a Go-Kart race on the track he's erecting next to the double helipad. "I'll take on any comer," he says.

It is such chutzpah, and such giving personality and promised hospitality that Deifik believes can change the fortunes of what 500 Boardwalk once was: Revel Atlantic City; a $2.4 billion-priced Ninth Wonder of the World that didn't allow you to smoke anywhere, wouldn't allow you to book any hotel stay fewer two days, and couldn't get you, with ease, to the gambling casino space, from anywhere else in the building.

With that, Revel opened in 2012 and closed in 2014, before being purchased for a song ($82 million in bankruptcy court circa 2015) by Florida developer Glenn Straub, who sold it to Deifik's AC Ocean Walk group in January 2018 for $200 million.

"We have added our share of new amenities," said Deifik of children's play/eat spaces such as Cereal Town, and a welcoming grand staircase that replaces what he called "the prison wall" between the casino entry and the boardwalk ("that alone defined what that past operation was all about").

"But if you can't find your way from your room to the casino, we have 'ambassadors' from Stockton University and the like who will guide you, hand you maps and not let you go it alone until they're comfortable you know what you're doing," said the new owner. "If you want to gamble and smoke, you can smoke. If you need a restaurant reservation, we own all of the restaurants here with the other partners such as Mark Wahlberg and Jose Garces [currently in league with Chicago's Ballard Bros. restaurant team].

"We can get that reservation. We have done away with all signs of arrogance."

There is no "no" at Ocean Resorts Casino. That may sound like razzmatazz salesmanship, but Deifik is cool with that, because he says he didn't get what was great about being aloof when it came to Revel. "Who won't take a reservation for one night? You can book a one-night stay, and I will be the first to give you a big hug when you do it."

That they are showing it all off starting June 28, the same night that Hard Rock Casino down the street is doing so, isn't a matter of competition (Deifik stated they picked the date over six months ago), but rather communion. "We stand a real chance of making this into an event of mammoth proportions — the transference of Atlantic City — with two megacasinos opening at once, rather than one at a time," said Deifik. "All eyes will be on AC. This city is ready for its truerenaissance."

"All eyes will be on AC. This city is ready for its true renaissance."

WHAT'S GOING ON

Along with Mark Wahlberg and what Joey Morrisey, calls "an entourage of his friends, still a surprise," the opening weekend of Ocean Resorts Casino will feature red-carpet walkthroughs and hang-outs with "America's Got Talent" judge Heidi Klum and her favorite non-requited love interest, Sal "the Voice" Valentinetti, Academy Award-winning actor and singer Jamie Foxx,and Russell Peters, the comedian who will also DJ June 28's opening party.

Speaking of DJs, on the opening weekend – June 29 through July 1 at the facility's HQ2 Beachclub – Lou Branchinelli has booked premiere spinning sets from one-time Fishtown producer Diplo, Kaskade, producer-turned-DJ Jermaine Dupri, and the Sunnery James & Ryan Marciano team. "Steve Angello form Swedish House Mafia and Shaquille O'Neal – yes, he's DJ-ing now – will be coming in shortly after the initial weekend," said Branchinelli.

NOTHING BUT NUMBERS

One thing that Bruce Deifik knows about the Revel spot that became his now Ocean Resorts Casino and hotel ("all 1,399 rooms," he says, proudly) is absolutely everything. "If you were to hide a packet of Equal in this place, within its 6.4 million square feet, Bruce would find it," said Entertainment Executive Lou Branchinelli. "He's on top of every detail."

So, then, a conversation with Deifik doesn't just come down to the money he's spent – a $200 million property purchase, a $175 million-plus renovation on the 6.4-million-square-foot property at 500 Boardwalk which originally cost Revel $2.4 billion to build and survived just two years until 2014 – but exactly what that cash was spent on, and how many yards and inches that expense will cover. Such as putting in a 7,000-plus person parking garage that didn't exist in the past, or the 138,000 feet of Ulster Irish carpet or the gaming machines and slots, 70 percent of which are new – all in a show of form, function and fashion-ability.

There are six swimming pools (including a saltwater pool and an ocean-facing sun deck), a renovated 5,500 seat Ovation Hall, 70,000 square feet of retail space, and a 32,000-square-foot spa, Exhale. There are 16 eateries, including three from Jose Garces and two from actor-producer Mark Wahlberg, who will bring his fast-casual burger chain Walhburgers and a bar called Entourage, based on the HBO series of the same name.

One dead, 22 injured in Trenton art festival shooting

Policy say a neighborhood gang dispute is thought to be the motive.

SARAH LUOMA
letters@metro.us

Chaos broke out at the Art All Night Trenton 2018 festival in the early morning hours on Sunday when two reported gunmen opened fire, injuring 22 adults and children.

The New Jersey art festival, held at a 24-hour venue held at the Roebling Wire Works Building on the 600 block of South Clinton Avenue, closed down following the shootings so officials can conduct their investigation.

According to CNN, one of the suspects, identified as a 33-year-old man, was reportedly killed by police. The second suspect is believed to be in police custody.

Reuters reported that the shootings were the result of a dispute among rival gangs in the neighborhood.

"We're still processing much of this and we don't have many answers at this time, but please know that our staff, our volunteers, our artists and musicians all seem to be healthy and accounted for. Our sincere, heartfelt sympathies are with those who were injured," festival organizers said on Facebook.

Around 2:45 a.m. on Sunday, two unidentified gunmen went on a shooting spree in an area where roughly 1,000 people were taking in the sights of artwork in various mediums.

"We're still processing much of this and we don't have many answers at this time, but please know that our staff, our volunteers, our artists and musicians all seem to be healthy and accounted for."

Multiple weapons were confiscated by police at the scene.

"It absolutely could have been worse given the confined space and the number of shots that appear to have been fired," prosecutor Angelo Onofri said.

All but five of the shooting victims are said to be in stable condition after suffering from gunshot wounds and were transported to Capital Health Regional Medical Center and St. Francis Medical Center.

Four victims were listed in critical condition, while one victim, a 13-year-old, has been listed in extremely critical condition, Onofri said.

THE REALITY OF SOLVING THE OPIOID EPIDEMIC

metro VOICES

letters@metro.us

According to Philadelphia Health Commissioner Tom Farley, the opioid crisis is "the worst epidemic we have faced in the last hundred years." Interestingly enough, the crack epidemic of the 1980s ravaged African-American and Latino communities little more than 30 years ago. Why wasn't the crack epidemic recognized as a crisis then in the same way that the opioid crisis is receiving mainstream support now? The answer to that question is skin deep.

After years of doctors overprescribing opioid painkillers, thousands of people became addicted to them, later turned to hard drugs like heroin and subsequently died of overdoses. While the loss of lives to fervent drug use is a social problem, the search for a solution to the opioid crisis is a sobering look at how social issues don't become crises until they affect white people.

For context, more than half of the 615 Philadelphians who died of opioid overdoses in 2016 were white. City officials regularly describe the opioid crisis as a social problem when it's affecting a less-marginalized group of people in much higher numbers than Philadelphians of color. Because of this disparity in the racial makeup of opioid abusers, it was easy to be cynical when the city announced its support for opening Comprehensive User Engagement Sites (CUES) to allow addicts to safely use drugs.

The CUES are designed to sustain drug users long enough in a safe environment to keep them from overdosing. In addition to injections, users will also have access to treatment and can even be revived by trained staff if they overdose. While these efforts to solve the opioid epidemic sound noble, they're decades late.

Parents on crack no longer had the ability to responsibly raise their children, leaving the obligation up to grandparents, aunts, uncles or anyone else directly related to them. Beyond the damage they did to themselves, crack addicts would also steal from those close to them, further alienating themselves and damaging already delicate family bonds. Had there been more patience from civic officials and legislators in working with communities decimated by crack cocaine, marginalized communities would have a better chance at success today.

Ultimately, the health of the community at large is important, but there needs to be an accountability moving forward for Philadelphians of all racial backgrounds. It shouldn't take white people dying from something in high numbers for public officials to finally consider it a crisis.

Philly's Universal Juneteenth Festival to return for third year

The Philadelphia Community of Leaders' acclaimed Juneteenth Festival is returning on June 22-23.

sam.newhouse@metro.us

Juneteenth is almost here. The holiday marking the freeing of slaves of African descent kidnapped from their native lands and forced into servitude in the United States will be celebrated by the Philadelphia Community of Leaders (PCOL) on June 22-23.

This year, PCOL's celebration stretches over two days. It will begin Friday, June 22, with a wreath-laying at Independence Mall at 6th and Market streets in honor of the slaves present at the birth of the U.S., and will continue with a parade in Center City and Festival on Penn's Landing on June 23.

It's the third year PCOL is organizing a Juneteenth celebration, building on the success of 2017's celebration that attracted a crowd of thousands, and dignitaries involving two kings from Ghana and many local officials. For more information, visit juneteenthphilly.org.

2-8 p.m.: Juneteenth Musicfest & Parade at Penn's Landing, one of PECO's Multicultural Festivals, with a marketplace, children's village, music and other performances.

HISTORY OF JUNETEENTH

On Sept. 22, 1862, at the height of the Civil War, President Abraham Lincoln signed the Emancipation Proclamation – legally designating all African-American slaves in the Confederacy "free" under federal law, effective Jan. 1, 1863. Slavery was still legal in the north until the signing of the 13th Amendment in 1865.

With the Civil War still raging, many slaves did not go free until after the Confederacy's defeat was made official with the surrender of Gen. Robert E. Lee on June 2, 1865.

Juneteenth commemorates June 19, 1865, the day the Union troops entered Galveston, Texas, and read aloud a proclamation to the city, including many slaves who were learning for the first time of their freedom and celebrated in the streets.

In the ensuing decades, Juneteenth has gradually risen to greater prominence as a national holiday, spreading to the north along with the Great Migration of former slaves leaving southern states. In recent years, it has become a Philadelphia staple, with not one but two Juneteenth festivals. Historic Germantown and the Johnson House Historic Site, which was a stop on the Underground Railroad, held their Juneteenth festival in Northwest Philly on June 16.

What a fine way to celebrate Father's Day! Rip a few hundred immigrant families apart!

The heat is rising on the Trump administration's policy of separating parents from their children at the border, and not just because of the large, canvas tents in the 100-degree South Texas sun. Democrats are howling. Texans are howling. Many Republicans are howling, too.

But Donald Trump, who could change the zero tolerance policy with a poke of his Twitter finger or a stroke of his pen, is still refusing to budge, pandering to the narrow swath of Americans who judge a national immigrant policy by how much pain its afflicts on the most vulnerable immigrants.

Mike Pence had better find a new Bible verse to defend this latest abomination, and it won't be Matthew 25:40: "Whatever you do to the least of my brothers, that you do unto me."

Even some knee-jerk Trump defenders are distancing themselves. "As a mother, as a Catholic, as someone with a conscience," White House counselor Kellyanne Conway said to Chuck Todd on NBC's "Meet the Press," "I will tell you that nobody likes this policy." Still, Conway, echoing others in the White House, continued to duck responsibility, blaming Democrats for a Trump administration policy announced by Attorney General Jeff Sessions.

But the pictures coming out of Texas were so harsh — 20 kids to a tent in the desert, their parents who knows where — that even first lady Melania Trump, who rarely contradicts her husband, felt pressure to weigh in. "Mrs. Trump hates to see children separated from their families, spokeswoman Stephanie Grisham told CNN, "She believes we need to be a country that follows all laws, but also a country that governs with heart."

Taking kids away from their moms and dads, of course, is not going to stop drugs from entering the country and protect us against ISIS terrorists. It won't even secure the border from the next wave of desperate Central American asylum-seekers. It certainly won't get Trump's wall built.

What it will do is hurt a bunch of parents and children.

Hope you had a nice Father's Day.

Democrats, activists rally against Trump's family-separation policy

NEW YORK IMMIGRATION COALITION

Democratic lawmakers joined hundreds of protesters outside an immigration detention facility in New Jersey on Sunday for a Father's Day demonstration against the Trump administration's practice of separating children from their parents at the U.S.-Mexico border.

"This must not be who we are as a nation," said Rep. Jerrold Nadler, one of seven members of Congress from New York and New Jersey who met with five detainees inside the facility, including three who said they had young relatives removed from their care after seeking asylum at the border.

The event in the city of Elizabeth came as news stories highlighting the family separations intensified political pressure on the White House, even from some of President Donald Trump's fellow Republicans.

U.S. officials said on Friday that nearly 2,000 children were separated from adults at the border between mid-April and the end of May.

U.S. officials said Friday that nearly 2,000 children were separated from adults at the border between mid-April and the end of May.

In May, Attorney General Jeff Sessions announced a "zero-tolerance" policy in which all those apprehended entering the United States illegally, including those seeking asylum, would be criminally charged, which generally leads to children being separated from their parents.

The policy has drawn condemnation from medical professionals, religious leaders and immigration activists, who warn that some children could suffer lasting psychological trauma.

The children are held in government facilities, released to adult sponsors or placed in temporary foster care. In South Texas on Sunday, several Democratic lawmakers, including Sen. Jeff Merkley, were due to tour detention facilities to call attention to the policy, while Representative Beto O'Rourke, who is running for the U.S. Senate in Texas, said he would march with protesters to the border.

"This is inhumane," O'Rourke told CNN. "I'd like to say it's un-American, but it's happening right now in America."

Administration officials have defended the tactic as necessary to secure the border and suggested it would act as a deterrent to illegal immigration, while Trump has sought to blame Democrats, saying their support for passage of a broader immigration bill would end the separations.

"As a mother, as a Catholic, as somebody who has got a conscience. … I will tell you that nobody likes this policy," White House adviser Kellyanne Conway said on NBC's "Meet the Press" on Sunday. "You saw the president [say] on camera that he wants this to end."

A rep for Melania Trump told CNN on Sunday that the first lady "hates to see children separated from their families" and hopes lawmakers from both parties can agree on immigration reform, in what was a rare public statement on a policy issue from the president's wife. Her "Be Best" platform, unveiled in May, is dedicated to children's well-being.

The lawmakers in Elizabeth waited about 90 minutes to gain access to the detention facility, which is operated for the U.S. government by a private contractor. Roy Garcia, 43, attended the protest with his wife, Linda, and their sons, 8-year-old Julian and 11-year-old Sebastian.

"It's hard for me to enjoy Father's Day knowing what's happening to other children and families," he said. REUTERS

Chesco man charged in 'nightmare' kidnapping, abuse of girl

DA says Avondale man lured child out of her home in middle of night and attacked her.

sam.newhouse@metro.us

An Avondale man is behind bars on charges that he lured a 4-year-old girl out of her home in the middle of the night to sexually assault her, the Chester County DA's office announced.

"A monster took me," the victim, who was quickly noticed missing and found by her parents, allegedly told police after the assault.

Now Humberto Guzman-Garcia, 35, is charged with kidnapping, aggravated indecent assault and attempted rape for his alleged assault on the 4-year-old. He was discovered in the act of abusing her by her father near the home, fled on foot and was later arrested, prosecutors said.

"This crime is every parent's nightmare," said Chesco DA Tom Hogan in a statement. "A monster comes out of the night, abducts your child, and sexually assaults her. This is proof that evil exists in the world."

Guzman-Garcia, whose last listed address was also in Avondale, was a "complete stranger" to the victim's family, prosecutors said.

On June 10 around 3:30 a.m., the parents of the victim realized she was missing and began searching for her. The girl later told her father that she heard a knock on the door, went to open it, and Guzman-Garcia then took her outside.

The victim's father told authorities that while searching for his daughter he saw Guzman-Garcia "about 50 yards away behind a shed" abusing the girl.

"We will not stand for children being hurt in Chester County."

Chesco DA Tom Hogan

As the victim's father approached, the suspect fled.

Police were called and found Guzman-Garcia in a disabled car nearby. The victim's father identified him as the suspect. According to an affidavit, medical examiners found the girl had suffered bodily injuries, and Guzman-Garcia admitted to abusing her.

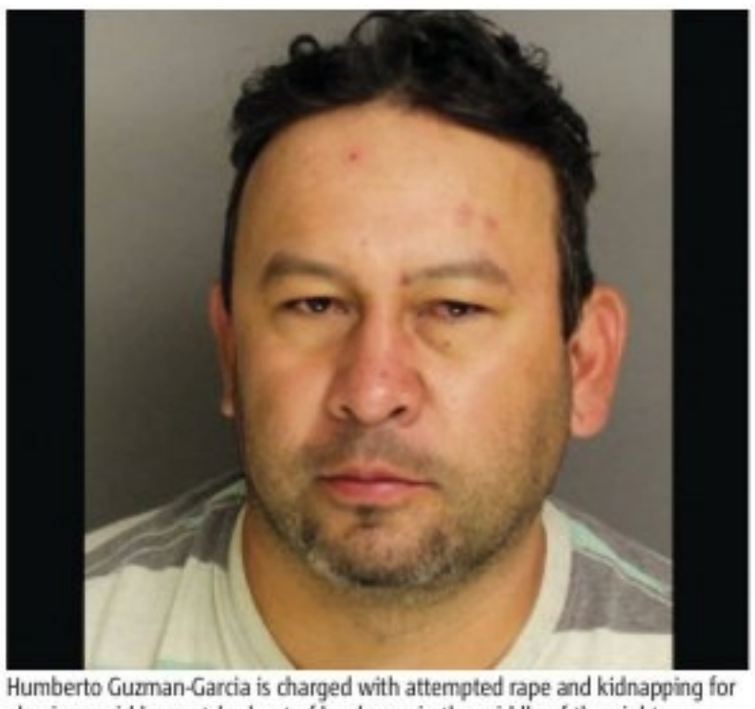
"Vigilance on the part of the young girl's parents and quick work from responding troopers were instrumental in apprehending a dangerous predator," said Pennsylvania State Police Troop J commanding officer Capt. James H. Fisher.

Guzman-Garcia is detained in Chester County prison. His last known address was on the 400 block of Lake Road, about two miles from the victim's home.

"This was a bold and brazen attack," Hogan said. "We will not stand for children being hurt in Chester County."

Hogan said the blatant nature of the attack sparked concerns that the same perpetrator may have assaulted other victims, and is urging anyone with more information about Guzman-Garcia to come forward.

Anyone with information about the case is urged to contact Pennsylvania State Police at 610-268-2022.



Humberto Guzman-Garcia is charged with attempted rape and kidnapping for abusing a girl he snatched out of her home in the middle of the night.

Five dead following Border Patrol car chase in Texas

GETTY IMAGES

Five immigrants died and several others were injured Sunday when their vehicle careened out of control while being chased by U.S. Border Patrol agents in Texas about 90 miles north of the Mexican border, U.S. media reported, citing officials.

Some of the injured were ejected from a Chevy Suburban packed with 14 people that was traveling up to 100 miles per hour (160 kph), Dimmit County Sheriff Marion Boyd told KFDM News 4 television of San Antonio.

"The vehicle ran off the road and caught gravel and then tried to recorrect and then caused the vehicle to turn over several times," Boyd told CNN.

"We've seen this many, many times, in not only this county but other counties along the border," Boyd told CNN. "This is a perfect example of why our borders need to be secure."

Some of the victims were flown by helicopter to San Antonio for medical treatment.

Border Patrol agents attempted to stop the vehicle when the chase ensued and were soon joined by Dimmit County deputies, KFDM reported.

Television images showed the smashed vehicle missing at least two wheels, with debris strewn across the road at the Big Wells city limit.

Four people died at the scene and a fifth died later, KSAT 12 television of San Antonio reported. The driver was arrested by Homeland Security officials, KSAT reported, citing unnamed officials.

Double parking!

Hey, leave room for the rest of us! ISTOCK

Pat King
Grumble Editor

This special Grumble has to do with the evils of double parking. Why can't people just park within the space allowed? Does anyone care about the rules?

READER WRITE-INS:

I'm writing to express my frustration and aggravation with people who take up two parking spaces, especially at the train station. The parking lot at the train station that I take just north of Boston, fills up very quickly. If you don't get there before 7 a.m. during the week, it can be pretty difficult to find a spot. There's really no parking anywhere near the train station either, as most of the side streets require a parking permit or do not allow parking on the street at all. So basically, if you don't get a spot before 7 a.m., you're pretty much screwed! Since spaces are so limited at this parking lot, people should be much more considerate when parking. I realize people are in a rush in the morning, but if you just take two seconds to check if you parked within the appropriate space, there wouldn't be all this wasted space and people wouldn't be screwed out of a spot. I know I'm not the only one that feels like this. I usually start out the day feeling pretty good, but when I see this my blood pressure starts to go up! It's unbelievable how people just don't care. Hopefully I'm next week's Grumble winner!

It really is annoying when a parent sits on public transportation with ear plugs in their ears and totally engaged in what is on their phone, while their children act like the vehicle is their own private jungle gym. Take the earphones off, turn off the phone and give your children the supervision they so desperately need.

Aspiring fashion entrepreneur? Learn how to get publicity at "Art of the Pitch" next week. PEXELS

Learn how to get publicity for your fashion brand

"The Art of the Pitch" will be held next week.

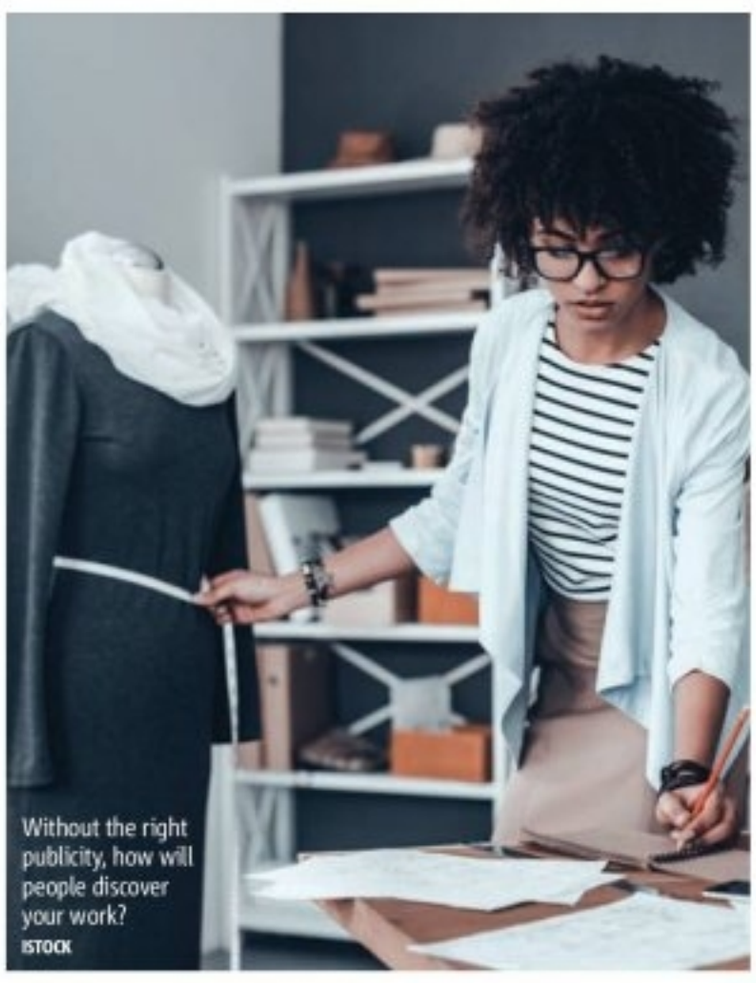
jennifer.logue@metro.us

Are you a fashion entrepreneur looking to make your mark on the fashion world? While social media has helped break down many walls for up-and-coming designers and brands, traditional press is still needed to further establish yourself.

Learning how to successfully pitch to media outlets, however, is a full-time job, and PR professionals have spent years honing this skill, as well as developing their networks.

On Thursday, June 21, Philadelphia Fashion Incubator and FGI Philadelphia will host a talk called, "The Art of the Pitch," featuring three PR-industry experts and one media professional. The aim of the event is to school the audience on how to get more publicity.

"Anyone with a brand to market, whether it's a clothing or accessories line, wardrobe consultant/stylist, boutique owner or others wants to gain more visibility for their brand/business," says Sarah Rodowicz, director of FGI Philadelphia. "If they want to sell more handbags, or meet new clients, publicity can certainly help with that. This can help expose them to a new audience that might not already be a customer or following them on social media."



Without the right publicity, how will people discover your work? ISTOCK

The fashion scene has seen tremendous growth over the years in Philadelphia, so events like this are important to help nurture rising talent.

"We see it in our membership, with more independent designers and other entrepreneurs," Rodowicz says. "Items that have a story behind them are special to consumers like one-of-a-kind Patrick Michael handbags [that are made in Philadelphia], shoes from Elena Brennan's Bus Stop Boutique, beautiful women's clothing from Annina King of Granate Pret, and fun knits from Janell Wysock. There is a story and a connection to all of these."

John Travolta on going gangster for 'Gotti'

The actor, film producer, dancer and singer chats with Metro about his storied career and playing the infamous New York crime lord in the new drama.

PAULO PORTUGAL
MWN
letters@metro.us

"Gotti" is now in theaters. BRIAN DOUGLAS

John Travolta and wife Kelly Preston join up as a couple (for the third time) in "Gotti," a film about the infamous Gambino crime-family leader. Metro caught up with Travolta at Cannes earlier this year, where he danced on the beach and admitted he wanted to play a Bond villain, among other highlights.

Is there a perfect setting for an almost perfect interview with one of the greatest character actors of our time? Picture this: a glitzy glamour suite at top of Carlton Hotel, the wonder of La Croisette, in the busy town of Cannes during the 71st edition of the film festival.

The equation quickly comes together when this elegantly dressed, charming man comes in the room and shakes our hands with an open, bright smile and shiny blue eyes. Not at all the dark character we saw during the screening of "Gotti," where the 64-year-old actor plays mobster John Gotti Sr. in a biopic directed by "Entourage's" Kevin Connolly.

Ahead, Travolta opens up about the role, his aspirations to play a bad guy in a Bond movie, and more.

You're promoting the 40th anniversary of "Grease" at Cannes this year.
Yes. I will be there presenting the film and inviting everybody to dance on the sand.
But isn't that amazing? This is a film that keeps on giving and giving.

Well, along with "Pulp Fiction," "Saturday Night Fever," "Face/Off" and your other hits.
Yes, all those films are still very watchable. They seem to be timeless. "Pulp Fiction" is 24 years old, but we still watch it on the internet. Same thing happens with "Grease" and "Saturday Night Fever." There are even emojis of myself in those movies! How do you predict something like that?

Do you have any sense when a film is going to have longevity?
That's a great question, but I don't know if there is any way to predict that. I guess I was just fortunate, without trying to be egocentric. I think I have more timeless movies than almost anybody.

You're working with Kelly (Preston) again. Is it hard to forget she's your wife?
No, and I'll tell you why. When we chose to work together we try to make it authentic. She could have done that work whether I was playing Gotti or not. We're not doing it because we're a couple. When it's honest and you have integrity, you can get away with being together. I knew she wanted to do this character, and I knew she could do it.

John Gotti is a pretty dark character. I know you wore his clothes, and even used his cologne. Did that help?
Yes. His scent is still there. I had his coat, his cufflinks, his watch, his shirt. And it fit me. It's interesting because he's shorter than me. I'm a big guy, but he was too. But I really liked wearing his stuff. It helped me.

Do you have any specific memories from the Gotti story?
My favorite was finding out why everybody liked him so much. Because my superficial reaction was at first: "Why was he so popular, why was he so loved?" He was a guy who didn't let a business go out of business. He helped out sick people, people in need. Even though he managed a criminal outfit, he came back to the community. In a way, he was closer to the "cosa nostra" that had a loyal devotion and trust. The RICO Act (Rackteer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations) blew all that out for him. But he was a different kind of criminal.

"I think I can do a good Bond villain. That would fulfill a childhood dream of mine."

Is it true that you want to do a Bond film?
Yeah! Because I grew up with those films. When Bond first came out I was 8 years old and was fascinated by it. It's something from my childhood that stays with us. I don't get impressed by Marvel films at all, but with Bond, yes. I think I can do a good Bond villain. That would fulfill a childhood dream of mine.

Why 'Drunk History' wouldn't

"Drunk History" returns with new episodes this week. COMEDY CENTRAL

Don't expect any sober storytelling on this show. COMEDY CENTRAL

Derek Waters explains ahead of season 5's return.

ANDREW HUSBAND
letters@metro.us

"Drunk History," the popular television show based on a Funny or Die web series from 2007, still has several episodes to go before season five concludes.

Yet this didn't stop Comedy Central from renewing it for a 16-episode sixth round. This excites co-creator Derek Waters, of course, but he's also itching to share what remains of season five with the fans.

"Jack Black is in the new season," he says. "He has been in all of them except for one, and in my opinion, Jack is the reason this show exists. It was just a one-time thing for a UCB show I did with Michael Cera. That's all it was ever going to be. It wasn't going to be on the internet. But Jack saw it and said, 'I want to play Benjamin Franklin.'"

Longtime fans should know that Black got his wish to play Franklin (as well as Elvis Presley, Orson Welles and William Mulholland). Audiences who tuned in from the beginning may also notice what Waters and co-creator Jeremy Konner have tinkered with since the Funny or Die days.

For instance, whenever the celebrity storyteller narrates their chosen sketch, the camera will occasionally cut to Waters drunkenly respond to or laughing at,their story. Season one only ever included audio of Waters' responses, but the format has essentially stayed the same.

"I never want the audience to feel that the narrator is in harm's way. That they're just drunk and alone, talking to a camera crew," he explains. "My goal is to let the audience know the narrator is OK, and to serve as their representative in those moments. It's easier to watch two people enjoying each other's company than one person getting drunk and telling a story. That feels like you're at a party you weren't invited to. I want to include the audience."

Derek Waters opens up about his hit comedy series. MARK DAVIS

Like when Kyle Mooney ("Arrested Development," "Saturday Night Live") drunkenly fails to mention his entire name before narrating the D.B. Cooper segment in season five's "Drunk Mystery" episode. Waters, who also isn't entirely sober, begins laughing uncontrollably.

"I get a better performance out of someone if they're drinking with someone, instead of being by themselves and feeling possibly exploited," Waters adds. "I never want anyone to feel like that, nor the audience to be worried about them."

The "Drunk History" team has plenty of ideas for what to do with season six, including answering the question,

GETTY IMAGES

"What would Ken Burns' baseball documentary look like if inebriated?" Until then, they're still focused on this season's remaining episodes, and the entries they've already aired. Like "Underdogs," in which Colin Hanks played Fred Rogers, and its connection to the show's opening title.

"Every year we change about four or five of those images in the opening," Waters explains, confirming that the "Mr. Rogers' Neighborhood" host's image was added this year. When asked if he's seen the "Won't You Be My Neighbor?" documentary out in theaters, however, Waters says he hasn't.

"I was talking to Colin about it. I wanted to see it and I asked him if he wanted to see it. He said, 'I have to prepare myself for it,'" he laughs. "I was like, 'Me too.' I'm not sure if I'm ready to cry in a theater yet. I'm always down for a cry, this? I don't know."

"Drunk History" returns June 19 at 10 p.m. on Comedy Central.

5 Personalized wedding gift ideas

Make your presents stand out this wedding season.

letters@metro.us

Step up your wedding gift game with these ideas. ALL PHOTOS ISTOCK

Love is in the air! It's officially peak wedding season. Unlike the anticipated marital bliss, shopping for the happy couple's wedding present can be anything but enjoyable. While the wedding registry is a prime place to start, we believe it's better to think outside the box and get a little creative. Here are a few personalized (and perfect) wedding gifts to keep in mind.

1 Gourmet gift box

Attending midsummer nuptials where the twosome is all about food? Great, a premade food gift box called The Couple That Cooks is all you'll need. Inside, the groundwork for a home-cooked dinner awaits—a golden wine opener, a cookbook, a gold ice cream scoop, and a gold Bluetooth speaker.

2 Sorbet set

Chances are the wedding you'll be attending is for a millennial couple. You know the drill: It's all about millennial pink and other sherbet hues. The new Le Creuset sorbet set of four ice cream bowls make the sweetest gift.

3 Airbnb gift card

This generation of newlyweds is more about the experiences than things. Giving the duo an Airbnb gift card is something they'll never forget!

4 Celebration wine set

Where there's a wedding, there are glitter and diamonds. Gifting a glittering box of California Sparkling Brut Silver Edition along with a confetti tube, and two elegant flutes are oh so swanky!

5 His & her robes

There were whispers pertaining to Meghan Markel and Prince Harry secret wedding registry that the couple was asking for lush monogram robes. Every groom and bride needs their own personalized robes. Try these from Mark & Graham on for size. $99, markandgraham.com

SIXERS SHOULDN'T TRADE FOR KAWHI

Kawhi Leonard wants out of San Antonio, but should the 76ers start trading away their young talent for him? Jovan Alford doesn't think so. GETTY IMAGES

OPINION

jovan.alford@metro.us

Should the Philadelphia 76ers make a trade for San Antonio Spurs forward Kawhi Leonard? That is the question many Sixers fans are pondering after the news broke Friday afternoon that Leonard wants out of San Antonio.

According to Chris Haynes of ESPN, the All-Star forward has grown frustrated with how the team treated his quad injury. Leonard also felt that the Spurs turned on him after he went to seek a second opinion on his injury.

Then to make matters more interesting in this NBA soap opera, Leonard preferably wants to go to the Los Angeles Lakers, league sources told ESPN's Adrian Wojnarowski. The Lakers and the Sixers are in the same boat this offseason: Both teams are in the conversation for LeBron James, Paul George and interested in Leonard's services.

However, is it worth it for the Sixers to get into the high-priced sweepstakes? Think about it, whoever makes a trade for Leonard will have to give up a young player plus more for a potential one-year rental.

Leonard is eligible for a five-year, $215 million contract extension from the Spurs this offseason. But he may not accept it and play out the final year of his contract, becoming a free agent in 2019.

If they were to acquire Leonard, could they convince the quiet superstar to stay in Philadelphia and not go back home to Los Angeles?

This a question that head coach Brett Brown and the rest of the Sixers' front office would have to ask themselves.

In addition to trying to get Leonard to sign a long-term extension, the Sixers would have to give up a lot for him.

On Friday, ESPN posted a story about the seven best trades for Kawhi Leonard. The Sixers were one of the teams mentioned in the story and NBA insider Bobby Marks came up with a potential package for them.

Marks had the Sixers giving up Robert Covington, Markelle Fultz, and the No. 10 pick in the draft in exchange for Leonard and Derrick White.

Again, this would be a lot for the Sixers to give up for a one-year rental. In his trade explanation, Marks said that the Sixers could offer Leonard a four-year, $107 million extension before hitting free agency in 2019.

But would Leonard accept an extension like that, when he could receive upwards of $200 million on the free agent market?

On the other hand, the Sixers would be giving the Spurs a first-team All-NBA Defensive player, a young point guard, who has not reached his potential yet, and a No. 10 pick that could turn out to be an impact player.

Is Leonard worth tearing down "The Process" for? I don't believe so, especially when the Sixers can still get James or George in free agency.

For the Sixers and their fans, they should not put all their eggs into this summer's free agency because they can still be a player in next year's free agency.

The worst thing the Sixers could do is rush and make a decision that sets the franchise back a few years. Remember the Andrew Bynum trade in the summer of 2012? It was a disaster, and while I'm not comparing Leonard to Bynum, it's in no way because one is a supremely better player.

We saw the impact on the franchise and the steps it took to just get back to this point with the Sixers in the playoffs this season.

Therefore, it would not be in the Sixers' best interest to make a blockbuster trade for a guy, who could bounce after one season, while San Antonio reaps the benefits of adding young and talented players.

Mexico shocks defending champs Germany in Group F opener

Hirving Lozano's goal propelled El Tri to an unlikely victory over heavy favorites Germany.

joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Mexico has exhibited a tendency to play up against elite opponents on the world soccer stage and it had another opportunity to do so on Sunday against Germany in Group F play at the 2018 World Cup. On Sunday, it did just that with a 1-0 victory over the defending world champions thanks to a Hirving Lozano goal 35 minutes into the match.

This is the third-consecutive World Cup that a defending champion has been unable to win its opening match. Italy drew to Paraguay in 2010 while Spain was embarrassed by the Netherlands four years ago. Even more remarkable is the fact that Germany has already trailed more in this World Cup than they did all throughout 2014 (eight minutes vs. Ghana).

There was quite a detour in manager Juan Carlos Osorio's tactics from the usual possession soccer Mexico tends to play. Instead, El Tri seemed content to sit back and absorb Germany's high press and try to find seams of openings behind the midfield in a counter-attacking manner.

It presented some good chances on the break for Mexico to obtain an unlikely opener in the opening half hour, but hesitation near the German box paired with some struggles from midfielder Miguel Layun resulted in those opportunities falling by the wayside.

A counterattack finally reaped a reward for the underdogs in the 35th minute sparked by Carlos Vela, who freed Javier Hernandez with a brilliant through ball from Mexico's own half. With numbers, Hernandez streaked down the center of the pitch and sent a low pass to Lozano on the left side of the box. After one cut got him past a German defender, he coolly finished past Manuel Neuer with his right foot to send the Mexican fans in Moscow into delirium.

The Germans almost sobered the celebrating fans three minutes later when a free kick from Toni Kroos was saved onto the crossbar by Guillermo Ochoa.

Germany pressure only built in the second half as they adapted to Mexico's counterattacking prowess for the most part. Although Hernandez wasted a glorious 2-on-2 break that could have secured all three points with 35 minutes left to play.

Regardless, there was still plenty of probing by the Germans around the Mexico box, but El Tri remained resolute, ensuring Germany was unable to connect on that final ball. That included a hit post on a backheel by Julian Brandt in the 89th minute.

It's a rare flop for Germany in a World Cup opener. In its last four introductions to a World Cup, Germany had outscored its opponents 20-2. The victory is Mexico's first against Germany in four meetings World Cup play and immediately puts El Tri in the driver's seat to win Group F with matches against Sweden and South Korea remaining.

Sixers draft profile: Wendell Carter

The Duke prospect could be available for the Sixers to take at No. 10.

sports@metro.us

The 16th one-and-done player at Duke would be a solid choice when the 76ers choose their player at No. 10 in the upcoming NBA Draft.

Wendell Carter Jr. is likely to be gone before the Sixers make their selection. If he's on the board, well, it would add more credibility to an already improved roster.

In his one year with the Blue Devils, Carter averaged 13.5 points, 9.0 rebounds and 2.1 blocked shots per game. Statistics didn't tell the whole story, as Carter played a large role in Duke going 29-8 and advancing to the Midwest Regional Final before falling to No. 1 Kansas.

The 6-foot-10 Carter measured into a 7-foot-5 wingspan and could be an immediate impact player at both ends of the floor.

The Sixers need another key player capable of shooting, rebounding, running the court and being a perimeter defender. As head coach Brett Brown is fond of saying, Carter "ticks all those boxes."

Carter also appears to be a team player and he's saying all the right things after working out for teams in the lottery.

"I'm good at all the intangibles, the little things that a lot of fans might not recognize but a lot of coaches do," Carter told reporters after a recent workout with the Chicago Bulls.

Carter, who turned 19 on April 16, became just the second player in Duke history to shoot 50 percent or better from the field, 40 percent or better from beyond the three-point arc and 70 percent or better from the free throw line. Shane Battier also accomplished the feat in 1998-99 and eventually went on to have a highly successful NBA career.

The Sixers could take advantage of yet another one-and-done if Wendell Carter is available. GETTY IMAGES

Like Battier, Carter also takes immense pride on defense. For a teenager, that's a huge bonus for an NBA rookie.

"My emotions are kind of all over the place," Carter told ESPN.com's The Undefeated when announcing his decision to put his name in the NBA Draft. "I'm excited to be chasing something that I wanted to chase my entire life. It was a pretty tough decision. I just wanted to make sure I made the right decision. I'm just thankful that I had an opportunity to make that decision. I'm blessed to even have the opportunity to make a tough decision like that. I think I made the best one."

Carter still has plenty of work ahead, however.

In the loss to Kansas, Carter played 22 minutes, scored 10 points, grabbed just two rebounds and fouled out. The NBA is a marathon 82-game season with the playoffs unlikely as a rookie. Regardless, it's a bigger stage with a season that will resemble three college seasons mixed into one. But with Carter's work ethic, improvement will be evident.

Being able to shoot and having a willingness to play defense will go a long way at the next level. The young Sixers would surely benefit from having Carter on their team. He would be a solid complement to Joel Embiid, Ben Simmons, Markelle Fultz and Dario Saric, among others.

The big question will be if Carter is still on the draft board at No. 10.

LEGAL NOTICES

STATE OF VERMONT
SUPERIOR COURT
WASHINGTON UNIT
FAMILY DIVISION
DOCKET NO. 192-10-16 Wnjv

In re: K.C.

NOTICE OF HEARING

TO: Shannae Harvin, mother of K.C. The State of Vermont has filed a petition to terminate your parental rights to K.C. You are hereby notified that a hearing to consider the termination of all parental rights to K.C. will be held on August 23, 2018 at 8:30 o'clock A.M., at the Superior Court of Vermont, Washington Family Division, 255 Main Street, Barre, Vermont. You are notified to appear in connection with this case. Failure to appear at this hearing will result in the termination of any rights you may have to K.C. The State is represented by the Attorney General's Office, HC 2 North, 280 State Drive, Waterbury, Vermont 05671-2080. Other parties are Jayveon Caballero and K.C.

The State of Vermont has petitioned the Superior Court to terminate any rights you might have to K.C. so that she can be freed for adoption. K.C. has been a ward of the State of Vermont since 2016. The State has alleged that there is no likelihood that you will be able to assume any parental duties for K.C. within a reasonable period of time and that K.C.'s best interests would be served by termination of your parental rights and allowing for her adoption. The State will present its evidence on these issues at the hearing on August 23, 2018.

Dated at Barre, Vermont this 11th day of June, 2018.

John Valente
Family Division Judge

We're taking a different approach to depression.

If you've tried depression medications and they haven't worked very well, you're not alone. We're developing an investigational drug designed to work along with your antidepressants to see if it can help address unresolved symptoms. Please consider joining this investigational study. As long as you're 18 years of age or older, you may be eligible to participate whether or not you are currently taking an antidepressant.

TO LEARN IF YOU QUALIFY, CONTACT:
Hassman Research Institute 1-866-230-4185

All eligible study participants may receive at no cost:

- CONSULTATION WITH STUDY DOCTOR
- STUDY DRUGS
- STUDY-RELATED CARE AND VISITS

Do you have bipolar disorder?

Are you currently experiencing depression?

If so, please contact HRI Trials today about research studies of investigational medications for bipolar depression.

Qualified participants must:

• Be at least 18 years of age • Currently experience symptoms of Bipolar disorder

Qualified participants receive:

• All study-related evaluations and study medication at no cost
• Compensation up to $600.00 for time and travel

Are you one of them?

TO QUALIFY YOU MUST:

- Be an adult
- Currently have moderate to severe rosacea - a persistent red face with spider-like veins
- AND have 12 - 40 acne-like bumps on your face

QUALIFIED PARTICIPANTS:

- Will receive all study medication and study care at no cost
- May receive compensation for time
